CURRENT BOOK PROJECT	“ Retrofitting Leninism: Participation Without Democracy in a Modern China. ” In this book, I examine China’s attempts to recreate positive governance outcomes, commonly attributed to democratic institutions, by retrofitting existing communist institutions for bottom-up decision-making and accountability. Using archival data as well as original survey experiments, I test the merits and limits of China’s governance strategy from a comparative institutional perspective. Based on a dissertation published in 2014.
